SECRET PAMPHLET AROUSES THE IRE OF SUFFRAGETTES

Statement That Relation Between Men and Women Would Be Worse Than Those of Wild Animals Causes Widespread Indignation.

That under suffragetteism the relations between men and women will become worse than the relations between "wild animals roaming the fields and deserts" is one of the arguments that has been advanced in the present war between suffragettes and anti-suffragettes that is waging to-day in the circulation of pamphlets and in mass-meetings.

Such is the sensational argument advanced in a pamphlet distributed by the League for the Civic Education of Women. Suffragettes declared to-day that they had been induced to join the league believing it to have been organized in behalf of woman's rights, and they were indignant at the circulation of what they characterize as an "outrageous pamphlet." It was stated that the members of the league were calling in their pamphlets and destroying them, but one was found to-day at the Woman's Club.

Quoted From Socialist.
The printed document contains an extensive argument against the suffragette movement made by Mrs. Caroline Fairchild Corbin, who quotes from the writings and addresses of many well-known men and women. She argues that suffragetteism tends towards socialism. Then she quotes the following from Dr. Aveling, the well-known socialist:

"Love is the only marriage recognized in Socialism. Consequently no bonds of any kind would be required, divorce would be impossible as there would be nothing to divorce, for when love ceased separation would be naturally ensue."
From this pamphlet Mrs. Corbin argues in her brief against Socialism and Suffragetteism:

"The relations of men and women, therefore, would be even more free than those of wild animals roaming the forests and deserts, for those do in most cases by love, not by force, caring for their own young, not having yet evolved the ingenuity necessary to construct a state which shall relieve them of these functions."
Further on the pamphlet quotes the following from an address of Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, the mother of Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, an advanced suffragette:

"A union of souls alone constitutes and sanctifies true marriage and any law or public sentiment that forces two immortal, high-born souls to live together as husband and wife unless there be love, is false to God and humanity."
The Price of Suffrage.
Another sensational statement of Mrs. Corbin's, who is President of the League Association, opposed to the extension of suffrage to women is as follows:

"These women are to be lifted up to a physical equality with man by placing upon their shoulders equal burdens of labor, equal responsibilities of statecraft, they are to be brought down from their altruistic heights, by being released from all obligations of purity, loyalty, self-sacrifice, and made free of the world of passion and self-indulgence, after the model set them by men of low and materialistic ideals. This is precisely what the emancipation of woman means in the socialistic state, no more, no less."
Attacked by Mrs. Meyer.
Another pamphlet that has raised a great furor is by Mrs. Annie Nathan Meyer, who is one of the leaders in the anti-suffragette movement. She has this to say:

"There is a cry welling up from the surcharged hearts of those who tremble for the steadfastness of American government; but it is not a cry for brains—it is a cry for character."
"Put United Womanhood," they say, (a resounding phrase much made use of—as if all women could be united on anything save puffed sleeves or pocket-less skirts), "Put United Womanhood"

Former Mayor's Daughter Held Up for Speeding Auto in Flushing

MISS LOUISE GRACE.

MISS GRACE HELD UP IN AUTO GOING 40 MILES AN HOUR

In Car With Miss Lucille Alger
When Flushing Policeman
Stops It.

Miss Lucille Alger, proprietress of the Red Brook Kennels, at Great Neck, and her friend, Miss Louise Grace, daughter of former Mayor William R. Grace, were in a Flushing magistrate's court to-day when the chauffeur of Miss Grace's auto was charged with breaking "all the speed laws on Long Island."

Seraphin Dayer, the chauffeur, was held in $1000 bond for trial. Miss Grace, who was standing half way up the platform, pulled off his overcoat, threw it at the feet of several young girls and hurled herself under the wheels. Before Motorman Higgins could halt the train one car had passed over the body.

The body was decapitated and mangled almost beyond recognition. In life the man was probably forty-five years old and stood almost six feet in height. He weighed 150 pounds and was dressed well. He had closely cropped sandy mustache and was bald-headed.

In his pockets was found a receipt from the Knickerbocker Trust Company for $5 for a dog, a box in the name of William Bloodgood, a small pocket book and a wallet which contained nothing but papers also bore the name.

An assignment slip in which Bronx property was transferred to Katherine Bloodgood from William Bloodgood was also found. Other addresses found by Detective John P. Shea were Walter Lakam, No. 625 Morris Park avenue, and John C. Coleman, No. 2181 Worth—a telephone number. There was no money in the pockets.

Motorman Higgins was accompanied to the South Ferry station, where he was relieved and placed under arrest by Detective Joseph Brawley.

Meyer Col'n, a witness, told the police that the man's act was deliberate. As soon as the body struck the rails several women screamed. Special Officer Farley ushered the women from the platform before a panic resulted.

WRECKAGE POINTS TO LOSS OF THE STEAMER SOO CITY

Vessel Left for This Port From Michigan City, Ind., by Way of Great Lakes.

NORTH SYDNEY, C. B., Dec. 4.—A report reached here to-day that a large amount of wreckage, including a steamer's cabin and furniture and sixty life-preservers bearing the name "Soo City," had been found near Cape Ray, Newfoundland.

The steamer Soo City left Michigan City, Ind., en route through the Great Lakes for New York on Nov. 1 last. The steamer was due here twelve days ago, having last been reported at Quebec on Nov. 15. Nothing had since been heard of her until pieces of wreckage drifted into the New Foundland shores. It is the belief in maritime circles here that the steamer foundered in a gale after leaving the St. Lawrence River.

The Soo City had been a passenger steamer in the Great Lakes service for many years. Through Thomas H. Franklin, a broker, of No. 30 Broad street, the steamer was purchased from her owners, the Indiana Navigation Company for the Puget Sound Line Company. She was on her way to this city in charge of Capt. F. A. Dority, of Chicago, who piloted the steamer through the lakes, and Capt. John Dillon, of this city, who was to act as ocean pilot.

It was the purpose of the Puget Company to have the boat refitted in this city. It was then to go around Cape Horn to Puget Sound for passenger service. In addition to the two pilots there were aboard First Mate Casey and a crew of some 18 men.

FLOURISHING PISTOL, SLAYER FLEES, CHASED BY 600 SCHOOL CHILDREN

BROKER HELD AS FORGER ON CHARGE OF MAN HE ARRESTED

Samuel M. Biddison, Accused of Making Spurious Bonds of a Washington, D. C., Corporation to the Value of $600,000.

Acting upon information supplied by Montefiore Meyers, who was brought here from Pittsburgh a few days ago, charged with grand larceny and confined in the Tombs, the District-Attorney's office caused the arrest to-day of Samuel M. Biddison, a broker, of No. 126 Nassau street, on a charge of forgery in the first degree.

Biddison is charged with forging 600 bonds of the Central Coal, Lumber and Construction Company, a District of Columbia corporation. Out of his arrest a big sensation is expected. It happens that Biddison is the man who caused the arrest of Meyers, on a charge of stealing five of these bonds. After Meyers was locked up he sent word to the District-Attorney that he had some interesting information about

DEATH CARD MAY SOLVE THE MYSTERY OF MAN'S SUICIDE

Supposed New Yorker, Who Shot Himself in Baltimore Hotel, Had Registered as J. L. O'Neal, of Harrisburg, Pa.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 4.—A man who registered at the St. James hotel here yesterday as J. L. O'Neal, of Harrisburg, Pa., committed suicide in his room during the night by shooting. The man left letters to the manager of the hotel and the coroner, inclosing money to pay his hotel bill and funeral expenses. Nothing was found among the man's effects to identify him beyond the name he registered under. He was about forty-five years old.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 4.—A baggage check found in the clothing of the man supposed to be J. L. O'Neal, of Harrisburg, Pa., who committed suicide in Baltimore, called for a suit case at the Pennsylvania Railroad station in this city. An examination of the baggage failed to disclose the positive identity of the suicide, who is believed to have resided in New York.

A card bearing the inscription "Charles Joseph Donnelly, died Dec. 3, 1908," leads the police to believe that the suicide was a relative or friend of Donnelly and that he chose the third anniversary of his death to end his own life.

POLICE THINK SUICIDE SENT POISON BY MAIL TO HIMSELF

Mystery in Death of Harry Boas in California May Be Explained by His Queer Actions in the Past—Recent Developments Point to Self-Planned Plot.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 4.—Failing to discover a motive for the murder of Henry J. Boas, the young electrician who died yesterday from the effects of a poison believed to be strychnine, the police of San Francisco and San Jose, after a thorough investigation incline to the belief that he secured the poison and mailed it to himself at his office.

GREAT BLIZZARD IN THE WEST TANGLES WIRES AND TRAFFIC

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Winter's first onslaught on wire service in the Middle West was made to-day, when snow, accompanied in some places by a high wind, demoralized the telegraph service between Chicago and Pittsburgh. Linemen were ordered out all along the line to make repairs as fast as possible. In other directions from Chicago conditions were reported normal.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 4.—A furious snow storm which set in early to-day prevails throughout northern Ohio, the ground being already covered to a depth of several inches. Telegraphic service is badly hampered. The storm has resulted in some delay to railway trains.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Assistant Secretary of State Bacon is confined to his bed by a severe attack of tonsillitis. Yesterday his temperature was very high, but he is reported to be slightly better to-day.

Hard Pressed Through Hoboken Streets He Runs Into Stranger's House and Is Caught Under a Bed.

DRINK CRAZED, HE MISTOOK VICTIM FOR HER SISTER

Intended Bullets for Keeper of Boarding-House, Who Had Ordered Him Out—Wounded Girl Has No Chance to Recover.

Brandishing a revolver with which he had just shot Miss Anna Turner, of No. 325 Garden street, Stanislaus Lehman ran several blocks through the streets of Hoboken to-day, pursued by a crowd of 600 school children. The man was whiskey crazed and there was one shot remaining in the revolver, but he made no attempt to fire it at the horde of boys and girls who stuck close to him in the chase.

The tragedy occurred in the home of Mrs. Mary Meassy, who conducts a boarding-house. Miss Turner is Mrs. Meassy's sister. Lehman mistook his victim for the landlady of the house in the semi-darkness of a hallway and fired four shots into her body, inflicting wounds that will prove fatal.

After shooting Miss Turner Lehman rushed from the house. Public School No. 1, three doors from the Meassy home, had just been dismissed for the noon recess, and the street was crowded with boys and girls.

The children heard the shots and some of them were running in the direction from which the sound had proceeded when Lehman appeared. Evidently he had expected to make his escape without much difficulty, and the crowd of children swarming about him puzzled him momentarily.

All Join in Chase.

He waved the revolver uncertainly and the children started to run away. Lehman dashed through them, shouting. Some of the older boys started after him. Their example was contagious, and the whole school joined in the chase.

The cries of the children attracted scores of men, who took up the pursuit. Lehman did not look behind, but bent every endeavor to put as much distance as possible between himself and the yelling crowd. He was outrunning most of the men, but the larger boys, trained in school gymnastics, had no trouble in keeping up with him.

Turning into Willow avenue, Lehman, hard pressed from the rear, saw that people ahead of him had heard the cries of the children and were getting ready to head him off. Suddenly he dashed into the dwelling at No. 235 Willow avenue and disappeared.

The children swarmed to the rear of the house to guard against the escape of Lehman by that route. None of the occupants of the house heard him enter and were greatly surprised when a couple of policemen told them they were sheltering a murderer.

A hurried search of the house was made, but no sign of Lehman was discovered. Then the policemen noticed that the covers of a bed in a room on the first floor seemed to be disturbed. They looked under the bed and found Lehman, feigning sleep. He was dragged out and denied knowing anything about the shooting, but when the policemen appeared at the front door with him the children set up a shout that he was the man they had chased.

The Revolver Disappears.

In some way Lehman disposed of his revolver after entering the Willow avenue house. It has not been found. From papers found in his pocket it was learned that he had served a term on Blackwell's Island a year ago for intoxication.

Lehman has boarded with the Meassy's for several weeks. He has been drinking heavily for the past few days and made so much trouble for Mrs. Meassy that this morning she ordered him to pack up and leave. He went out, made a round of the saloons in the neighborhood, and then returned to the house with a revolver in his hand. He met Miss Turner as she was passing and followed her to the right shoulder. Then, as the woman fled, the slayer fired another that entered below the left breast; a fourth fractured the right hip and a fourth passed through the palm of the woman's right hand.

At St. Mary's Hospital, where the wounded woman was taken, the surgeons said it was impossible for her to recover.
